THE CAROLINA SPARTAN. BY CAVIS & TRIMMIER.

T. O. P. VERNON Associate Editor.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates, and contracts made on reasonable terms.

The SPARTAN circulates largely over this and adjoining districts, and offers an admirable medium to our friends to reach customers.

Job work of all kinds promptly excented.

Blanks, Law and Equity, continually on hand or printed to order.

CAROLINA SPARTAN

From "Porter's Sparit of the Times."

THE HIGH-METTLED RACER.

BY CHARLES J. FOSTER.

"Say nothing of his baving been with the horse, upon any account, till after the race. Your father and Henley will keep quiet as a matter of course, and the rack would not extract a word of truth from Jolly in these circumstances. Mark me, young man! I will, with Mr. Hawthorn so, gall I mean to tell him, candid. What assistance, have every betting man in the town, and Dobson, too, carefully sounded, by offers to take the odds against Stridea way, in less than two hours. If he has been tampered with, they know it; and Henley. their eagerness to lay against him will be tray their knowledge. A horse of his game and speed is too dangerous a custo mer for them to go against for a great amount at long odds, unless they know him to have been "made safe." Meantime, out of the room unobserved. let the horse rest, and take Joliv's advice as to bringing him to the post. We will the groom, had arrived at home with Stride send him down." So saying, Dr. Ryder away. It was near the evening hour, when and the Squire departed.

CHAPTER III. "Onward he went—but slack and slow, His savage force at length o'er spent, Ti e drooping courser, faut and slow, All feebly foaming went."

Baytown races were over. Tom Thorn ton's horse had started, but had been beaten, almost without a struggle. The jockey was instructed to pull him up, when he found that he was beaten, and he promptly did so. This result, fulfilling the predic-Thornton, puffed up the former even to a more extravagant degree than before.

It was the evening after Mr. Dobson's return from the saces, that he called upon the worthy miller at his own house. The substantial gentleman to whom Mr. Dobson addressed himself upon entering the room, received his visitor with a sort of growling toleration, according very well with his per-Attired in a shabby suit of pepper and salt colored clath, and a low crowned white hat, he sat, smoking a pipe, in a large flag-bot tomed chair, from which he did not rise when Mr. Dobson entered. The miller prided himself upon being a plain spoken man, as he considered a man of his "weight of metal -- for he was worth fifty thousand pounds-had a right to be. At this particular juncture he was inclined to be exceedingly plain spoken, for he was in no amiable humor. Miss Henley was looking out of the window, and Miss Dolson was fidgetting uneasily in a chair by her side, at as great a distance from the amiable miller as she could conveniently get.

"I understand, Mr. Henley, that Old Thornton has lost above a thousand pounds upon this race," said Dobson. "More fool he!" said the miller, senten-

"Undoubtedly. There never was such of. After the repeated warnings I gave to the young fellow, it was ridiculous presumption for them to suppose their horse could possibly win." The miller turned a stern eye upon Dob son, took a deep draught of his ale, knocked the ashes out of his pipe, refilled it, and went on smoking without reply. "I consider that those who lost upon that race are perfect unmittigated fools, sir," said Dobson.

cried the miller, with a surly scowl. "I'm cursed, if I didn't back that horse myself." seal,

"I am misunderstood, sir; entirely misanderstood. I mean those who owned the horse and trained him, and had every on "You've no occasion to tell me that, you horse and trained him, and had every opportunity of knowing what he was. The know. Will 'e take someth way in which they have deceived others, smoke a pipe?" and induced them to bet by misrepresentations, is as shamefel, as their own foolish

"You knowed this hoss wouldn't win, "That was my decided opinion, often ex-

"I ben't, sir; but they got me to lay this time. Told me I was sure to win, rot 'em!" "Is it possible!" said Dobson, with an endeavor at sympathy.

"Had I supposed that designing pershould have spoken; these shameful machi- tituted the hospitable tankard, in the be- all that, he would have preferred not to nations would have been defeated."

I foolishly confident, but I am certain he and I keeps it for her wedding-day. Drink it seemed, as by a barrier, by the foliage of Price Two Dollars per annum in advance, or $2.50 at the end of the year. If not paid until sker the year expires $3.00.

Payment will be considered in advance if made within three months.

No subscription taken for less than six months.

Money may be remitted through postmasters at our risk.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates, and sontracts made on reasonable terms. don't want his son here after my da'ter, drank to celebrate his wedding day.

dor; which she perhaps had expected before. Mis Dobson simpered, and covered her face with her fan, for the miller's language was, to say the least, ungenteel, though not altogether unpleasant to the ears of the Dobsons.

Miss Henley was high-pirited. With a proud glauce at Miss Dobson, and without noticing the pantomimic signals of the Ensign, who had posted himself behind old Henley's chair, she replied, "Whether Mr. Thornton comes here or not will perhaps make but little difference. It will not distress me, if he never comes again; but I d to-night agen?" said the miller, observing that she had risen and put on her bonnet.

arter 'e, mind that. I don't want them her. I love her for herse'f alone, s.r."
hogs in a routing up the taters." So say"It won't do, Tom Thornton. Whoever ing, the miller turned to his pipe and tankard, leaving Mr. and Miss Dobson to sidle Meantime, Mr. Tom Thornton and Joe.

they led him through the straggling village street of Woodbourne, apparently in good heaith. Men shook their heads and stood aloof now, who had before been eager to receive the borse and congratulate the owner of him. Not as it used to be, when he came like some conquering hero, surrounded by troops of friends and ardent admirers, and with all the boys of the hamlet following as a respectable distance. Some who, on other occasions, had always known that being beaten, without the friends of him and true, as I loved her. She loves me inving a first-rate excuse?" Tom Thorn ton felt the humiliation of his favorite keen. "I tell 'e she don't," roared the miller, said the groom.

he pace at all that he can gallop at." And that ain't the only thing; he's "Nobody, Joe, nobody; and some of sooner have the soger." these people shall have enough of his speed and bottom yet. Losing one race don't away; and very likely old Eclipse himself was beaten sometime."

So saying, Mr Thornton locked the stable door, and went to his supper. After that meal he dressed himself with some would she say? was the question which at present mainly interested him. If she recretted the lost race, and encouraged him look forward to another, why all was well, man; I don't know as she can get a better Strideaway should win the next, retrieve his faded laurels, and cover Dobson with deserved confusion. Whatever Mr. Hampton and Dr. Ryder might have I treed about that gentleman, to confirm their suspicions, they had said nothing to any but young Thornton; and they had desired him to maintain the strictest secrecy.

The young farmer found Miss Henley out, and her worthy father still smoking "What the devil do'e mean by that?" and drinking, as she had left him.

know. Will 'e take something? Will 'e

It may be supposed that the miller felt more amicably towards his visitor. Not at thick clouds swept over her, and wrapt of themselves and make fight against the confidence was deplorable. I wish I could all; the offered refreshments and pipe were acquit the young farmer of blame," said as the rich viands always allowed to the As Ensign Dobson and Miss Henley ap are now three or restain. condemned man, before they swing bim off. proached the church-yard, he proposed that country for the artificial bre smoke just now," said Torn.

"Drink out of my tankard," said the mil- "Are you afraid of ghosts, or of taking and made to make pressed, sir," said Dobson, with much complacence.

"Why didn't 'e express it to me?"

ler, handing it to him. "Drink hearty, cold," said sho.
lad!" The miller wished him to drink deep, with the best intentions. He had a tial air, "the man who has been inured to "I did not think you were a betting man, muddle-headed notion that a man with a the hardships of a military life, and taught belly full of good, strong ale, would care to march undaranted to the cannon's month, conclusion little or nothing about the unqualified re | does not dread taking cold, and is not was, yea, worse than a heathen!—for the Mr. Dobson had suffered incredible hard—the privile son, and that the ale in question would be

"Well, you've got in a nice mess, and pulled other folks along with 'e, hey?" said the miller, after he had drank, and refilled his pipe... "I have been very unfortunate, sir, but I feel the losses of my friends far more than I do my own," repfed Tom.

"You do, do 'e! Then you are a bigger fool than I took 'e for. How much has your father lost, now?" "I can't say. A good deal too much."

"A thousand pound?"
"Near about, I fear."

"More, I'm told. And that'll take all arm. his ready money, and all the fat stock on his farm to pay, besides that big wheat rick. Prices is down, Tom Thornton."

"If he has lost more than a thousand, it will; but he can pay it, sir." "Very likely he can. But when you ome to my house, from this time, let it be sence. If you do not want him to come, in a neighborly way, and in no other, Tom," you had better tell him so, father, and not said the miller, conceiving that he was you's doing now? You ben't going out here a coorting, lad. I wun't let her have "Mr. Henley, this is too hard," said Tom.

"I am not after you daughter for her money, from your father, that you desire that I senley.

"I am not after you daughter for her money, from your father, that you desire that I should visit his house no more. Be it sol "Well, go on! and shot the garden gate without a shilling, and bless the day I get con for your work-s better pitcher in a upon her cheek; but it was unseen. hay-field I never see, except myself, when I was your age; and I shall be glad to have 'e come over, as usual, in a neighborly way, and pitch mine, when it's fit to carry. I tell hours! was your age; and I shall be glad to have and pitch mine, when it's fit to carry. I tell bound. 'e, I like 'e, Tom Thornton. But don't you come a'ter my da'ter, because she don't

"HI never believe it, till I hear it from he would "do the trick," now assured every her, sir," said Tom, rising. "She loved me, body that they had always been convinced sir, I know it; and I have doze nothing to tion of the Ensign, and humbling Tom of his inferiority, if thoroughly tested. And forfeit her love. We have stood at the when it was suggested that he was unwell, foot of our mother's graves, side by side, in they replied, to the intense indignation of the old church-yard, beneath the old yew the fat trainer, "Who ever heard of a horse tree. Twas there I felt she loved me, sure ly, as well as Jog, the groom; but their con- enraged-"nor never did. Old churchfilence in his powers was unshaker. And yard -all humbug! Don't talk to me when they were at the Thorndike Farm, about love in old church-yards. I didn't sonal appearance and present occupation. after Tom had thrown off his coat, rubbed court her mother in the church-yard, and About the age of fifty, of tall and heavy him down, and carefully tended him, he she was never minu, said the m building sort of expression about the mouth.

Mr. Philip Henley looked exactly like a Joe, by heaven?

stood with his hand upon his crest, and the deadl it came upon the strong man's passion, and quelled it, as the rain from "If he could go against them hosses heaven beats down the stormy sea. He again to-morrow, he would win in a canter," smoked sometime in silence-his face turn ed away. When he again fronted Tom, Blockheads are trumps, my boy. Play out I believe he would, Joe; they didn't go his features were as hard as ever, and his eye stony,

"Tom," said he, coolly and deliberately, a lasting hoss. Who ever seen him passed "she don't love 'e at all-she told me to when he was well, and made the running?" tell 'e not to come here agen. She would "Do you say it?" said Tom. "Do I sav it! Ay, I do! and so I tell 'e spoil a borse. Marigo'd herself was beaten; candid! You ought not to want telling; if Mr. Treat commenced his arrangements to the other. was the Queen of Trumps; so was Hark- you wan't blind, you would see it yourself. Do 'e expect her to say, "Tom Thornton, 1 have fell in love with this soger officer?"

"No!" cried Tom, furiously." care, intending to visit the miller's, and have an interview with Miss Henley. What in a neighborly way; and always have a more simple than the artificial breeding of trembling, kneels with awe and fear. We pipe, a pot, and a knife and fork for 'e, and fish. The entire mystery consists in taking have seen Niagara in all its artistic splen Charlotte 'Il look upon 'e as a particular and this would put an end to their further ranged in a series of steps, so that re

"Sit down," said he, motioning Tom to a bat.

"We had bad luck yesterday, Mr. Hen"Walk, came to a yew tree of great size and an innumerable over can be turns walk, came to a yew tree of great size and an innumerable over can be turns of the size of the plan of the becomes a fish. Thus annotative walk, came to a yew tree of great size and an innumerable over can be turns of the plan of

"I will take a little ale, sir, but I'll not they should take another path to her fa and we see no reason ther's house.

Arab cherishes the man who eats bread and ships in the barracks at the Tower for two turning "Had I supposed that designing persons were misleading one whom I so greatly respect, I should have interposed, sir; I should have spoken; these shameful machibility and the household cup—the miller prospections would have spoken; these shameful machibility and the household cup—the miller prospections would have preferred by the pointed to the household cup—the miller prospections would have preferred by the pointed to th "It was my uncle who told father that the horse was sure to win," said Miss Benley, with some displeasure.

"And Tom Thornton as well," said the miller, with a snarl.

"This here is the oldest ale in the parish, and the share and shar

SPARTANBURG, S. C., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1857.

As he drew hurriedly along the stately avenue, Mr. Dobson pressed Miss Hentey's hand nervously to his side, perhaps with a resolute determination to shield and protect her from all harm.

"Mr. Dobson," said she, stopping, "my mother's grave is near us. A little to the right-the white tombstone covers her re-

"Ah! fine old lady! Excellent woman no doubt! Never stopped here at this hour, I am confident, when she could help it. Come along, my dear Mrs Henley."

"Stop!" said a deep voice, and a vigo rous hand seized Miss Lientey's disengaged aunon's mouth, the Busign would have ofted incontinently, had not his compan-on exclaimed—"Mr. Thoraton!"

"This, sir, is most singular and objec-tionable behavior," said he, trensulously.
"Look here!" said Tom; "my business is resture as the other, advanced upon bim, well met. I come to tell you here, where we have often wandered, that I have heard should visit his house no more. Be it so! I have loved you well; but I make no repotter mate; for you are incapable of ap-er him. That night she had thought of had sympathized with him in his defeat; Never, in the whole range of their acquainhand in hand, by the graves of their departed mothers, and he imagined that at least a part of the tenderness the motherless girl betrayed was born of love for him, the motherless boy, had she been moved by feeling as near akin to love for him as Dobson, the game is with you! If you do not improve the opportunity, as a soldier your hand.

informed that a very extensive establish- a thousand. At one point we are informment has been started at Shattock's Lake, ed the rocks close over the river, and it is by Mr. Upham Treat, formerly of Maine. easy for a person to jump from one bank early in the spring, and has already stocked his preserves with shad, bass, salmon is hereabous presented to the eye cannot be and other fish, to a considerable extent. surpassed by any in the world. Language When the spawning season comes on, he falls to describe it, and the pencil of the ar "Well, then, drop this here coorting business, and let us go on friendly and comthe female during her time, and by running dor, and we have seen what was called Charlotte 'Il look upon 'e as a particular the lemme during gentle steady pressure grand scenery, but never never have we man: I don't know as she can get a better down her back, force out her ova in a jar down her back, force out her ova in a jar of pure fresh water. The male is then taken in the same way and made to yield a few drops of the spermatic fluid in the same tracked out.

The false old villain comforted himself upon the result of the conference. It was better for both parties, he thought, for he was resolved that they should not marry, and this would put an end to their further.

Idon't know as she can get a better down her back, force out her ova in a jar of pure fresh water. The male is then taken in the same way and made to yield a few drops of the spermatic fluid in the same tracked out.

Ere long the pencil of the artist will trace the rarest beauties and give them to the world's view. Ere long the spirit of enterprise will make good roads, and build a good house, at which visitors may stop. No place can present the same attractions and this would put an end to their further. intimacy.

After a hurried walk of fifteen minutes.

Tom Thornton looked about him, and found to keep the eggs tree from any solid

Scenes in Western North Carolina,

LINVILLE RIVER.

There are numbers of natural curlosities throughout the South which are never seen you see flashing in its blaze the windows of or heard of except by some adventurous traveller, and known intimately only by source a golden tinge is thrown upon every the intrepid mountain hunter. Thus these less, and everything is mellowed into soft curiosities remain unnoted, while yearly thousands of our citizens go Northwards in search of health or pleasure. Among such may be classed the Falls of the Linville River, in Burke county. We doubt not but numbers of persons in Burke county never heard of them. They are to be found poor thing, it sees troublous times before it in the northwest corner of that county, near gets out there too." We have never seen to that famous tree upon which the four counties of Burke, Watauga, Yancey and lities at all -an idea may be formed by our Tuesday, in company with Col. Childs, we rode within three miles of the Falls, and ing arrived in half a mile of them we dising compelled to put certain portions of our try .- Asheville (N. C.) Spectator. person in a state of nature. Having crossed, we proceeded down the eastern bank Double Narrative of Creation in Genesis-"I can maintain her equal to her bringng-up," said Tom. "I'll work early and ate, sir."

The part here!

Silently, proudly, she howed, as he look ed wistfally at her, where she stood, pale, in the fitful gleam of ghostly light. The an appearance as any mountain stream; it manner for about two hundred yards, the while falling three several times, twisting and turning in every shape that human imagination can fancy.

Following our guide we seated oursel n the top of a rock around the base of which the river rushes in its wild career. About forty feet below us on one side dash ed the troubled waters of the Linville, on the other these same waters, having forced themselves through a passage not more than ten feet wide, made their descent over e last and highest fall. Here the mist as rising, and the rays of the sun, as it shone through which caused the peculiar view, resembles so much the sulphurous flames which Bunyan so well describes as arising from a certain dark abode, that it gives the eavern under the lower fall the name of the Devil's Hoie. Our position was a com- of the second section. manding one, but not such as a person with see the stream again assume its comparatively placid appearance, but now, instead of banks almost even with its bed, it was locked in by an impenetrable mass of chimney rocks, which continue for miles down its course, rising in the most majestic ARTIFICIAL BREEDING OF FISH.-We are hundred feet, and in some places nearly to grandeur to a height of one, two and three

The grand sublimity of the scenery which which from its location we supposed to be the Pilot. Just as the sun fades beneath the borizon it casts forth a clear red light, and the house of Morganton. From the same loveliness in the accomplishment of nature's most splendid creation. Far, far beneath hid amid a mass of shrubbery and rock the Linville finds its way to the Catawba Turning to our guide, we asked, "Does the Linville run there?" Ha replied "Yes, and idea of man's linleness as this point. chimney rocks of the mountain are then leaving our burgy, we went on horse-back to the house of Mr. David Franklin who ed, and turning looked again. Gladly absolutely necessary for Lord Palmerston summit, but nature changes to ride on account of fallen trees. We We returned to Mr. Franklin's house, thankful for what we had soon, but wish terfall having for some time been roaring ing that we could spend weeks roaming among the beauties of that mountain coun-article with the above title, in which he shows that the beginning of Genesis contains two accounts of the Creation; the one extending to the third verse of chapter second, inclusive; and the other to the end of chapter third. The first section, according to this history of seven successive days. The second section has also an unity of its own. The beginning and end of it both refer to the Garden of Eden. The second section has a distinct superscription, Gen. 2: 4. Compare similar superscriptions, Gen. 5: 1 20: 1 11: 10 36: 1: but see also Gen. 10: 20, 31, 32, 36: 30 Ps 72: 20. Sometimes we find double titles. See Gen X: xxxvi. In the first section the Deity is called Elohim (God) thirty-five times, and by no other name. In the second section he is called Jehovah Elo him (Lord God) nineteen times, and by no other name, where the writer speaks in his own person. There are three instances in which the woman or serpent speaks, and the Deity is called Elohim, Gen. 3 1: 3 5. The Professor judges that the writer of the first section had digested plans before him, and he notes rythmus and uniformity in the construction of his sentences, contrasting with the more simple and arties style The writer of second, often finds occasion to go back, in order to mention circumstances which he had omitted in their proper place. After noticing the formation of man, and being about to place him in the Garden of Eden, he goes back to describe the planting and location of that garden, chap. 2: 8 15. Man is placed in Eden, and the temptation is at and; the sacred penman goes back to notice the origin of the woman, as she was a partner with him in the transgression. This igain leads the writer to describe the oceaion of her being created, chapter 2, 18 25. Prof. Gibbs notices some apparent incon-

In the first section, man app ars to be created at the same time with woman, Gen. 1: 26 27. In the second, he is formed from the dust, chap. 2: 7 4: 19, and woman afterwards, 2: 22. In the first section, plants are produced by the mere will of God, and before the creation of man, Gen. 1: 11 26. In the second, plants appear to originate from natural causes and from human culture, chap. 2: 5 8. In the first section, the earth has more of Neptunian origin, Gen.

No place can present the same attractions dency. He dogs not see how the trath of ranting as a watering place that Linville can. Its beautiful scenery—that never has been full this theory can well be denied, nor does he distance a lone mountain rises to the view, The Anglo-French Alliance. Under the agreeable disguise of a frien !ly visit, the recent meeting of the Emperor Napoleon and Queen Victoria at Ostorne was in reality very much like a settler was in reality very much like a settlement of accounts between two partners, on which the continuance or dissolution of the particle the continuance or dissolution of the particle that it is a security to England in Europe, while she is engaged fighting for the stability of her empire in Asia, provided French policy is allowed to be supreme in Turkey and the Danubian Principalities and prayidad (and and, allowed to be supreme in Turkey and the Danubian Principalities, and provided Lord seen Stratford de Redeliffe is sacrificed to bis enterprising diplomatic rival, M. de Thouve-The n. l. After a due examination of accounts. three hundred feet high; from their base and the Anglo French alliance is declared to three hundred feet high; from their base the mountain descends with fearful rapidity be renewed on a basis of extreme confiality, ty into the Linville river—how far, it is be. with every prospect of a long and happy experience: Leaving Childsville on the morning of like it was almost into the bowels of the England who are not altogether pleased with what they call "the after-lianer settle." ment at Osborne." Even those who agree to accept the Emperor's terms, regard them querel Egypt, his object was to attack Great Britain in India, and thus obtain advantages in Europe. What the uncle's genius failed to attain, the nephew has achieved by the force of circumstances. The pressent troubles in India are a triumph for France, since they have compelled Great Britain to abandon to a rival the supremaey in Turkey which she has exercised for It is a mistake, however, to regard this as a personal triumph of Napoleon, due only to his sagacity and far-seeing policy. It is true that by his alliance with England and the Russian war, he made Europe fordivision, has a visible unity, it being the get, or seem to forget, the Usurper in the Emperor, and, without danger to himself, gave France what she wanted and expected from the successor of Napoleon I, namely, military glory, and a powerful position the family of nations. But the war once oncluded, and all the advantages of the alliance obtained, it depended, not upon Napoleon, but upon the feelings and interests of the French people, whether the alli-ance should be continued. It is not forgot-ten by France how sorely she was humbled and slighted by England in the Syrian affair, under Louis Philippe; and had Louis Napoleon, in the case of the Danubian Principalities, consented to yield again to England, the French people would have regarded it as a second humiliation, and a sacrifice of the national honor. For the preservation of the entente cordiale, Louis Philippe made many and great sacrifices, and the consequence was, that discontent and irritation were general among the people, at the disregard of their interests for he profit of England, and the vantage of their Sovereign. Louis Napoleon cannot afford to expose himself to the same reproach. He hears those who are the warmest friends of the alliance with England insisting that the feelings and wants of their nation must be duly regarded, as an essential condition to its continuance; and he knows that among the most prominent of his statesmen, and the warmest Bonapartists, civil and military, there is a powerful party who consider an alliance with "perficious Albion," contrary to the interests of France, and who regard Russia as the safer and more natural ally of the two. Knowing this, Louis Napoleon is too astute to let it appear for a moment that he is willing to make any national sacrifice for the advantage of England. His Turkish policy, therefore, is not so much his own, as the expression of what he is assured

NO. 31.

s the national will. He is however, to all appearance, really anxious to continue the glish alliance as long as possible. To it is due the recognition of the nephew of the "Co sican bandit" on a footing of equality with the legitimate sovereigns of Enope, and a breach with England would ecessarily occasion the hestility of the maority of those States which follow her poliby for moral or material reasons, and give increased strength and consistency to the various parties in France which are constantly opposed to Napoleon. Were he willing to dare the enmity of England, and accep; the consequences, he would not have beautiful scenery—that never has been ful deem it inconsistent with the divine authority which we wish to attach to the Bi pathless of his foreign Minister Count Was dinartors of the Rattlesnake Spring, the farility of the soil, and last, but far from least in the pleasure seeker's eye, the large quantity of game which is to be found thereabouts. Having spent the afternoon at Linville we returned to Mr. F. J. E. . He entered, and slowly pacing along the wark, came to a yew tree of great size and an immunerable ova can be turne antiquity. Here he stopped, beneath the shadows of its gloomy boughs. The night was dark and lowering. Sometimes, the light of the moon fell with ghastly glare light of the moon fell with ghastly glare.

He entered, and slowly pacing along the wark and become school. This allow a ninner absence and the people of the annexation of Belgium, Savoy, and the Rhenish proposed was dark and lowering. Sometimes, the ware transfer to the people of Tender and the rested for the night. The house and there rested for the night. The night of the moon fell with ghastly glare light of the moon fell with ghastly glare.

He entered, and slowly pacing along the ward and become school. Huse a minute overly an immunerable ova can be turne and the people of Tender and the shadows of its gloomy boughs. The night of the annexation of Belgium, Savoy, and the Rhenish proposed with the same and the restance to the people of Tender and the restance of the same and the same and the conduct of the Mexican war, never before revealed to the public. It appears in the East, This prospect would doubt the first the first proposed would doubt. This Rock is a canons formation, resting on that Gon. P. was the confidential represent less flatter the military arder of the French. a ridge between the Hawk's Buland the tatire of the President invested with a kind and be considered a glorious continuation of the considered a glorious continuation of the career of the great Emperor; but the congretake mountain, very near to the latter of surveillance over Mr. 1781, the Commission is the ter. It is a high rock, conical in shape, between fifty and seventy feet in height, and six feet through at the base, and rising Scott and Santa Anna, by which the latter open war, in which the first important reverse would be a second Waterloo; that, between fifty and seventy feet in height, and six feet through at the base, and rising to a thic ness of twenty-five or thirty feet.

This rock is fist on top and covered with passes that it.

This rock is fist on top and covered with gray moss. On one end of its top there surrender of the City of Mexico-that Gov.

Russian allowed for this passionate nephew was encored into between Trist and General sees that it can only be realized by a Euconomic form.

Scott and Santa Anna, by which the latter top and covered with passes after a battle, an armistice, and the gray moss. On one end of its top there surrender of the City of Mexico-that Gov.

Russian allowed. This rock is flat on top and covered with gray moss. On one end of its tep there has a rock about fifteen feet long and four feet. This rock is to all appearances just about to fall—at least ten feet of it project in a community of kissing the bride, when the said, playfully, the bride, when the chiral playfully, the facts are least to fall appearance of having the formula he said, playfully, the facts are least to the project was persisted in and that out of this recall, thus produced, and the said, playfully, the facts to the President, Trist was teached—and that out of this recall, thus produced, grow his difficulties with grandest sights that can exist in mature, the ended our ranks!" "How are least to the chiral playfully, the facts to the Cleveland and fare the facts to the Cleveland and fare and that out of this recall, thus produced, grow his difficulties with grandest sights that can exist in mature, the expense of England, thus produced, grow his difficulties with grandest sights that can exist in mature, the conscillate, and not extend his power. As affairs now stand, by this visit was teached—and that out of this recall, thus produced, grow his difficulties with grandest sights that can exist in mature, the conscillate, and that the sundends in power. As affairs now stand, by this visit was teached—and that out of this recall, thus produced, grow his difficulties with grandest sights that can exist in mature, the can attain the conscillate, and not extend his power. As affairs now stand, by this visit was teached—and that out of this recall, thus produced, grow his difficulties with grandest sights that can exist in mature, the clip was stronder of the Clip of Mexico. The scient and that the project was provided the project was provided to the project was provided to the facts to the President, Trist was teached—and that out of this recall, thus provided the project was provided to the facts to the President Trist was teached—and that out of this recall, thus provided the project was the extended an

"This here is the oldest ale in the parish, upon the ear; the brawing should of the catawina's open to the view drunken passers, and hackney coachined, "it only takes off their dresses." "Then," one, much less you. He may have been when our Charlotte was just ten years old, and still—isolated from the living world, should sell it."

"This here is the oldest ale in the parish, upon the ear; the brawing should of laddes, t suppose." "No," said her friend, drunken passers, and hackney coachined, "it only takes off their dresses." "Then," from its origin to its source, the whole of and still—isolated from the living world, should sell it."

"Frank, where have you been?" "I've posed, deacon, that a man of your age would give such advice to a man just tasti-hoop in Chestnut street."